

Claims Reporting: Don't Delay

A delay in reporting claims can result in up to 40% higher costs.

Reporting Delays can cause:

Increased medical costs

Studies reveal that any delay will result in as much as 40% higher claims costs.

Delays returning employees to work

Not reporting claims immediately will hurt the ability to effectively manage medical treatment and will delay the employee's ability to return to work.

A higher frequency of litigation

Delays will increase the chances of litigation between 10-45%.

Educate supervisors and employees to ensure your claims are reported immediately.
